Miami, Florida, July 18, 2006...BR-111™ Exotic Hardwood Flooring is proud to announce its popular Triângulo® Engineered hardwood flooring is featured in the new Hampton Designer Showhouse. The sprawling estate was recently unveiled to the delight of 1,000 guests at an exclusive, invitation only gala hosted by House & Garden Magazine.

With more than 18,000 square feet of living space, the Hampton Designer Showhouse is situated on four acres near Sag Pond and combines old world charm, upscale 21st century amenities and elaborate attention to detail. A masterwork of architectural and interior design elements, the showhouse carries an estimated value in excess of $25 million.

Maduro Chestnut, from the BR-111™ Triângulo® Engineered collection, was chosen by designers Priscilla Ulmann and Jennifer Powers for the home's exquisite 750 square foot living room. Featuring a rich espresso color, accented with unique graining and random black striping, the exotic hardwood flooring brings a dramatic contrast to the cool pastel colors that are present throughout the room's décor.

A host of celebrity personalities toured the Hampton Designer Showhouse throughout the weekend grand opening celebration, including Kelly Ripa, escorted by husband Mark Consuelos, Issac Mizrahi, as well as former Mayor, Rudy Juliani and his wife, Judy.

Triângulo® Engineered features a thick sawn wear layer that provides the durability of solid hardwood flooring. Finished with a crystal clear aluminum oxide wear layer, Triângulo® Engineered is available in seven exciting exotic hardwood products.

Celebrating its 15th anniversary, BR-111™ continues to be a leader in the exotic hardwood flooring arena, providing a wide variety of species available in solid and engineered products; all are recognized for their beauty, performance and overall value.

The Hampton Designer Show House will be open to the public from July 16 through August 27, 2006. For more information, call 631-745-0004
